NOMOPHAGE

First seen on the Garamondia OSR Blog

Law eaters. Militant agents of chaos itself. They infiltrate worlds to undermine hegemonic societies and, especially, religions. As disciplined as black ops.

Imagine a tall humanoid with 6 spiny, oddly jointed insectoid limbs and a head like a giant mosquito. They wear baroque, ornate suits of heavy armour made from an iridescent metal that rings when struck. They can speak all languages in a droning, buzzing way.

A large horror.

Encounter: 1, potentially with 1D6 cultists
Omen: Sudden inability to organize thoughts
Disposition: Focused on mission

STATS

Hit Points: 27 (6 HD)
Armor: 3 (heavy)
Movement: normal

Hit It: normal
Dodge It: hard

The nomophage is a horror. It can only be killed if the creature doing the last blow succeeds on a save versus fear. If the killer fails, the nomophage survives with 1 HP, terribly mangled, and can run immediately.

The nomophage projects a terrible aura that frightens every living creature seeing it for the first time unless they fail a save.

ATTACKS 3x per turn

Chaotic Rake. The nomophage makes a melee attacks (1D8). On a hit, the target must save or roll on Skerples' D1000 mutations table. Mutations take inventory slots.

Fractal Blade Whirl. The nomophage makes a melee attacks (1D10). On a miss, the target has disadvantage on its melee attacks against the nomophage for 1 turn.

Coprophagy. The nomophage starts absorbing a corpse with its proboscis and heals 1D6 HP. A human-sized corpse can feed a nomophage a maximum of 3 times.

LOOT

Law eaters always carry their oversized (+1 damage die size) radium weapon, as well as ... (roll 6 times)

1. Nothing.
2. Nothing.
3. A baroque piece of jewelry worth a Bag of Gold.
4. An iridescent piece of radium armor worth a Bag of Gold.
5. A vial of Law Solvent.
6. A Time Key.

NOMOPHAGE

First seen on the Garamondia OSR Blog

STUDY THIS HORROR

If you've heard of nomophages, you can spend time and resources between adventures to research them. You need gold to gain access to the right madman, library or laboratory to do so. For each Bag of Gold spent this way, you have 1-in-6 chance to have a breakthrough. If you have access to a specimen, you have advantage on your roll for a breakthrough.

Once you have broken through, each new Bag of Gold spent researching will trigger the following mutation. Roll 1D6:

1. You lose a limb of your choice.
2. You mutate a new insectoid arm.
3. One of your eyes splits in 2D6, and you gain knowledge of a heresy compelling enough to recruit as many cultists.
4. You gain a new articulation in one of your limbs can secrete two doses of Law Solvent.
5. You grow a 1' proboscis. You can take a turn to drain fluids out of a fresh dead body and heal 1D4 HP. This dries the body out. Increase the die size each time you get this mutation.
6. A Time Key. No mutation.

Mutations take inventory slots.

Radium (material)

A radium weapon ignores the resistances of celestial creatures. A radium armor is effective against magical damage.

After prolonged contact, save or be poisoned, save again each day to cure. Fail 3 times and roll on Skerples' D1000 mutations table.

Law Solvent (ingredient)

Can be used to erase up to 20 words of a text, as well as the memory of the erased text.

If ingested, you must roll on Skerples' D1000 mutations table.

Time Key (magical item)

Can be used on a door to make it lead to 1D100 days in the future for 1 round. The trip is complete and one-way as soon as a limb crosses and the threshold is opaque.

The key turns to dust once used.